CTM's Teaching Artists

Tammy Moschea is a familiar face at CTM, teaching acting and movement classes. She received a BFA in performance from Milliken University in Illinois. Since 2005, she has worked as educator, director and choreographer at numerous schools in the Madison area. She has also performed in Madison with CTM and The Madison Rep.

Jeff Skubal has choreographed movement and fight sequences for many local theaters and high schools. He earned his BS in Theater and Drama at the University of Wisconsin-Madison, and has performed onstage and as a Motion Capture artist. Jeff has taught stage combat at CTM and staged action for its mainstage productions for several years.

Jody Reiss, a professional actress, performed with the Irondale Ensemble Project in New York City, toured Russia with the Irondale Ensemble production of Uncle Vanya, and performed at Riker's Island Prison. Jody brought intergenerational productions to schools in New Jersey and New York state, and taught group dynamics, spontaneity, and trust in theater programs in New York schools. Currently, she teaches acting in many arts programs in the Madison area and performed with The Madison Rep.
